HOLTKAMP IS INSTALLED AT SWEET BRIAR COLLEGE

THREE MANUALS IN NEW CHAPEL

Virginia Installation at Gallery Institution Will Serve Many and Varied Uses There

A three-manual, 27-rank organ, de-signed and built by the Holtkamp Or-gan Company, Cleveland, was installed in July in the newly completed chapel at Sweet Briar College, Sweet Briar, Va. Enclosed in a walnut case, the organ is situated in the choir gallery over the narthex of the chapel. The great divi-sion is located in the center of the gal-lery with the swell behind and above it. The positiv is hung on the wall at the right and the upper work of the pedal is suspended from the left wall. As an instrument for teaching and practice, it is being used daily by stu-dents and faculty members, as well as for three weekly chapel services. Organ recitals and choral concerts will feature the instrument. A three-manual, 27-rank organ, dethe instrument. Dr. G. Noble Gilpin is choirmaster. The chapel organist is Dr. John Shan-non, For his first public recital Oct. 24 Dr. Shannon played an all-Bach pro-gram. gram.

Plans for the dedication of the chapel include a dedicatory recital April 20 by Fenner Douglass.

REBUILT SWELL DIVISION

AT ST. THOMAS COMPLETED

The swell division of the organ in St. Thomas Church, New York City, has been completely rebuilt. Damaged has been completely rebuilt. Damaged by water in 1965, it has been partly out of commission since that time. Slider chests have been installed, eight new stops added, and the principal chorus revoiced. The work was completed by Gilbert F. Adams who designed and voiced the new reeds and mixtures. A large audience heard this new tonal work for the first time when M. and Mme. Maurice Duruflé played the first

START NEW ORGAN JOURNAL IN FARAWAY NEW ZEALAND

Volume 1, number 1 of Mixtures and Mutations, a Journal for Organ Enthu-siasts, has reached our desk. Edited by A. Ross Wards who gives his address as 57 Hall Crescent, Lower Hutt, New Zealand, it has enough interest to augur a growth from its present mim-cographed form to a regular magazine. We found of special interest stoplists from Wellington and Hamilton, a list-ing of 63 builders from various coun-ting who have built entrang for New Realand churches and auditoriums, a "platter chatter" column on records, and a "snippet's column" of humor and information. One New Zealand builder, Croft, has been making organs in New Zealand since 1898 and has some

New Zealand since 1898 and has some 60 organs functioning plus a large number of rebuilds. Editor Wards is sparking his readers with questions about organs and churches for which he hopes those readers will supply the answers. He has also begun an organ stop dictionary, in the first issue getting as far as BA - A.

HILARIOUS RCO CONCERT

HARVESTS FUN AND PROFIT

A program, Organ in Sanity and Madness, devised and produced by Peter Hurford Sept. 24 at Royal Festival Hall, Hurford Sept. 24 at Royal Festival Hall, London, must have been a prize ex-ample of broad English humor at its best. The program booklet illustrated with hilarious cartoons and posed pic-tures (examples: (1) a crew of eminent organists — we recognize Dr. John Dykes-Bower of St. Paul's Cathedral, Mr. Hurford, Simon Preston of West-minster Abbey and Gillian Weir — hitched like a team of horses dragging the organ out the front door of the RCO while, we think, Dr. Francis Jack-son holds the staff at bay with a re-volver; (2) members of the celebrated choir of King's College, Cambridge, climbing all over the fountain outside their chapel). Program notes for a whole list of specialties are equally witty. Plans are specialties are equally witty. Plans are afoot for the release of a recording of the concert. Interested North American organists might write: The Clerk (RCO Records), Royal College of Organists, Kensington Gore, London, SW7, England.

The concert was also very successful financially, raising a considerable sum for the RCO's Centenary Appeal.

MUSIC FROM WESTMINSTER ABBEY was the title of a program at St. Mark's Epis-copal Church, Shreveport, La. Oct. 30 in which William Teague, Norman Z. Fischer and Marilyn Hansen combined their choirs.

SERVICE HONORS CHARTER MEMBER AS SHE RETIRES

Inez Mayritte Holley, organist for more than 47 years at the Messiah Bap-tist Church, Bridgeport, Conn. and charter member of the Bridgeport AGO Chapter, was honored Oct. 9 at an ap-preciation service in connection with hcr retirement. She received a plaque to be placed on the organ in her honor, keys to the church and to the organ given by William Blackwell, trustee, and a purse from church members and friends. friends.

A brief history of Mrs. Holley's serv-ice to the church was read. The music for the program comprised her favorite hymns sung by the combined choirs under the direction of Martha Jones, associate organist. Gerald Morton play-ed the organ program and two of Mrs. Holley's grandchildren were guest grandchildren Holley's were guest pianists.

An alumna of the Yale School of Music, Mrs. Holley was an organ stu-dent of the late Samuel Lister, Seth Bingham, and the late Alvin C. Bruel. She began her service as a church or-ganist and choir director in 1914.

D.C. AREA ORGANIST HONORED AFTER 40 YEARS IN CHURCH

Effie A. Collamore completed 40 years as organist of the Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, West Hyattsville, Md. Sept. 25. She was hon-ored for her record of service at a reception given by the congregation. She has never been late for a service and has been absent for illness only on rare occasions. She retired Oct. 30 and became organist emeritus.

A native Washingtonian, Miss Colla-more studied at Peabody Conservatory, Baltimore. While a junior in high school she began teaching piano. She organ-ized and directed the junior choir at the church for 15 years. When she was ad-mitted to the District of Columbia AGO Chapter she was its rounder Chapter, she was its youngest member.

For 17 years, in addition to two Sun-day services, Miss Collamore has played for morning and evening services at the U.S. Soldier's Home. In recent years she has given monthly organ recitals at the church.

She will continue on the faculty of the Washington Bible College and to teach in her home. She is a charter and faculty member of the National Guild of Piano Teachers and has been a mem-ber of the Friday Morning Music Club for many years. for many years.

AT THE NAME OF JESUS-SATB-by Joseph Roff. Based on Phil. 2: 9-11, At the Name of Jesus is a versatile, broadly-appealing offertory whose modest technical demands and excellent traditional melodies are sure to win the approval of choirs and congregations of all de-nominations this spring. (Organ or Piano accompaniment.)

GLORY BE TO GOD ON HIGH-SATB-by William P. Latham. It's text taken from The Book of Common Prayer, William P. Latham's exciting new festival anthem is an unaccompanied work of bold contemporary harmonies and of driving, exultant rhythms. Glory Be To God On High is a vivid selection of uncompromising modernity that will be equally at home in the hands of either the mature choir or advanced concert ensemble.

JESUS, JESUS, WE ADORE THEE-SATB-By L. Cherubini (1760-1842); arranged by Elwood Coggin. A thoughtful and valuable new ar-rangement of a fine traditional chorale, Jesus, Jesus, We Adore Thee offers in its lucid minor tonality an opportunity for the choir of medium ability to make an unusually moving contribution to the Lenten min-istry of music. (Piano or Organ accompaniment.)

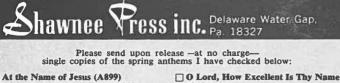

LORD, MY GOD, SHOW MERCY UNTO ME (MISERERE MIHI DOMINE)-SATB-by Pietro Guglielmi (1727-1804); arranged by Wal-ter Ehret. Delicacy, fine structure, and poignant shadings of harmony all mark this distinctive and stately chorale as ideal for Lent. With both Latin and English texts, Lord, My God, Show Mercy Unto Me offers a fervent prayer of redemption in a musical setting whose burnished harmonies evoke the solemn majesty of the Pieta. (Piano or Organ accompaniment.) accompaniment.)

O LORD, HOW EXCELLENT IS THY NAME!-SATE-by Bene-detto Marcello (1686-1739); arranged by Walter Ehret. With optional Soprano solo, O Lord, How Excellent Is Thy Name is an impressive offertory of medium difficulty that gracefully anticipates with clarity and delicacy the great music of Haydn, C.P.E. Bach, and the youthful Mozart. (Organ or Piano accompaniment.)

THAT THEY ALL MAY BE ONE—SATB-by Joseph Roff. A fitting salute to the United Nations on that organization's twenty-first birthday is this strong new prayer for brotherhood by Joseph Roff. Bearing a dedication to the Holy Family Church of New York which serves the U.N. community, this straightforward, vigorous anthem is particularly apt for the spring worship service, or as a memorable highlight to the school graduation program. (Piano or Organ accompaniment is optional.)

THREE EARLY AMERICAN HYMN TUNES-SSA-arranged by Bob Burroughs. Dating from the era 1759 through 1825, these Three Early American Hymn Tunes still move audiences and congregations with their forthright texts and musical settings of rugged beauty. A rich historical experience and a valuable new musical departure for both treble choir and chorus alike. (Piano accompaniment.)

The new spring anthems described above will be released January 1, 1967. To ensure a head start on new music for spring in your choir, simply clip, fill out, and mail the coupon below. Single copies of the music you desire will be rushed to you the moment it is released.

He will supervise and participate in a series of weekly organ recitals on the Aeolian-Skinner in the university's new Frank Lloyd Wright-designed auditorium. His first programs appear elsewhere in these pages. Mr. Brown, a native of St. Simons Island, Ga., holds the BM magna cum laude from Westminster Choir College and the MM from the Eastman School of Music, and is a candidate for the DMA from Eastman. Recipient of Fulbright awards in 1961-1963, he studied organ and harpsichord at the Academy of Music in Vienna where his teachers were Anton Heiller and Isolde Ahlgrimm. His other organ teachers have been Grimm. His other organ teachers have been Addie May Jackson, Savannah, Ga., Dr. Alexander McCurdy and David Craighead. He has held church positions in Princeton and Rochester, most recently as organist-director of Rochester's Church of the As-cension. A pupil of Herman Genhart in conducting the recent of constraints conducting, he served as a coach for Opera Under the Stars and as conductor of the Teutonia Liedertafel, both of Rochester.

PHILADELPHIA CHURCH PLANS TELLERS ORGAN

FLORENCE GORDON IS ORGANIST

Downtown Zion Baptist Church Known for Urban Renewal Leadership — Completion Set for Summer

The Tellers Organ Company will install a new organ for the Zion Baptist Church, Philadelphia, Pa. in the summer of 1967. This is one of the large Philadelphia churches which has been a leader in urban renewal and is well known for the development of the Opportunities Industrialization Center. This movement, with Centers throughout the United States, is now spreading abroad under the guidance of Dr. Leon Howard Sullivan, pastor of Zion Church

Howard Sullivan, pastor of Zion Church. The organist, Florence B. Gordon, consulted with Howard S. Okie, Jr. in the tonal design typical of Tellers' restrained contemporary work. To take full advantage of the chancel and nave tone-openings, both expression chambers will feature double expression selectively controlled by the organist, allowing virtually unimpeded speech to supplement the exposed great division.

HISTORIC N. J. CHURCH ORDERS AUSTIN ORGAN

ORANGE PRESBYTERIAN. FIRST

4-Manual Designed for 150-year-old Group - Elmer Lancaster Is Minister of Music

"Old First Presbyterian", the First Presbyterian Church of Orange, N.J. has signed a contract with Austin Organs, Inc. for a new four manual organ to re-place the present Aeolian-Votey instru-ment ment.

Organized in 1717 the First Presby-terian Church of Orange can trace its lineage to the early Connecticut Valley Settlements in the 1630's. Some of the Settlements in the 1630's. Some of the first families of the Connecticut Valley Settlements, distressed by the growing "liberalism" and compromise manifest in the easing of membership require-ments in these carly Congregational communities, joined in the migration to Long Island and subsequently to the shores of the Passaic River where they founded the New Ark Colony and its old First Church under the leadership of Robert Treat. By 1717 a sufficient number of members of the Old First Church had established residence in the area five to ten miles west of Newark to found the Mountain Society which, like its mother church in Newark, served both as the ecclesiastical and the civil authority of the area. The congregation remained in the Congregational fold until 1748 when it embraced constitu-tional Presbyterianism. tional Presbyterianism.

The present colonial church building, the fourth edifice, was built in 1928 on the site of the Old Burying Ground to which the church has held title since 1723.

The new organ will be located m hard-plastered areas to the rear of and on both sides of the chancel. Some pipework and the antiphonal organ from the present installation will be reused. The stoplist was drawn up by Austin Organs, Inc. in consultation with the Rev. W. Elmer Lancaster, AAGO, minister of music. Charles L. Neill handled negotiations for Austin.

President's Column

In the light of our practices during the past two years, you would by now have read a detailed account of the National Council Meeting which would have been held early in October. If you have followed closely, and I am sure that you have, the proceedings of the Council meetings during the past year, you will remember that for two good reasons we have decided to hold two meetings a year instead of four. The reasons are the expense of bringing councilors from different parts of the country in the first place, and the best use of the time of heavily involved peo-ple in the second. In the past we have met four times a year for about three hours. It seemed to me an economy from every point of view if we were to meet twice a year for a whole day. The Council meeting for this fall, therefore, is scheduled to be held in Detroit on Monday, Nov. 14. It is to be held in Detroit for several reasons. One of these is that in the light of the wider geographical distribution of our councilors, it is economical of their time and our expenses to meet in a more centrally located situation than New York. Another is that the Detroit chapter has impressed me so much with its activities during the past few years that I wanted, if possible, for our Coun-cil members to meet some of the officers of the Chapter and see what it is that produces the results which have made them known as the "Dynamic Detroit Chapter". When you read this, we shall have meet and in Ianuary you will see an ac-In the light of our practices during them known as the "Dynamic Detroit Chapter". When you read this, we shall have met and in January you will see an ac-count of the proceedings, which is the earliest we can appear in print because of deadline. We shall have discussed, among other things, a budget for the future operations of the Guild in view of our greatly expanding activity, a Nominating Committee for the 1967-68 slate of officers and councilors, a pro-posed chartered airline flight to Europe (which I hope, if it goes through, will not be allowed to interfere with people's attendance at Regional Conventions, and above all at the ICO), the implementa-tion of a number of recommendations growing out of committee reports, and one big surprise which is of such concern one big surprise which is of such concern to the Council that I prefer not to think about it until they have deliberated on it!

itl Meanwhile, I wanted to keep you in touch with one or two things that have been done in this new year. You may remember that it is my policy to try and move responsibility for various com-mittee activities around the country so that we can have the best use of the best brains in all parts of our organiza-tion. The Publicity Committee has been relocated in Atlanta with Adele Dieck-mann as Chairman. The one major piece of business that they are working on is of business that they are working on is an excellent suggestion made by their predecessors that the Guild plan to make an award at the next National Convention (Denver, in case you could have possibly forgotten!) to the news-paper critic who, in the opinion of the Committee, has made the greatest con-tribution to the profession of organ and church music since the last convention. You will be hearing from this committee very shortly. The Examination Committee in Boston has done splendid things for us, but ton has done splendid things for us, but because of the close liaison which must exist between National Headquarters and this Committee, I have decided to spread it out a little bit, with its Chair-man in New York. Since we have, as our newly elected Vice-President, Vernon deTar, who is not only one of the great-est musicians practicing his art in the church in the English speaking world, but is a renowned teacher, I have asked him to head this committee, which he but is a renowned teacher, I have asked him to head this committee, which he has consented to do. The members are spread in an arc from Boston to Wash-ington and I have already attended one meeting and they are going ahead great guns. I have felt somewhat disappointed that the long longed for syllabus for the Choir Master Certificate has not yet Choir Master Certificate has not yet appeared. We were assured in a report earlier this year that it was to go to press Feb. 15, but I am now reassured that no less a person than Daniel Pink-that no less a person than Daniel Pink-ham has the matter in hand at the pub-lishers and we all look forward to its appearance with enormous anticipation. I could go on to tell you of other committee work, but I don't want to steal all of their thunder. I just wanted you to be quite sure that since you have not read any reports of Council meetings we have not come into a long meetings, we have not gone into a long deep sleep like Rip Van Winkle. Keep looking, and you won't be sorry! ALEC WYTON National President

Richmond The Richmond Chapter held its meeting Oct. 13 at Northminster Baptist Church with Dean Beverly Jesse Kieth presiding. The fund drive which began Sept. 23 was making prog-ress and little difficulty was anticipated in reaching the goal for 1966-1967 series. The chapter was to sponsor Wendell Piehler of Colby Junior College for Women Nov. 14 as first in the Organ Repertoire Recital Series this year. The dean suggested that each mem-ber inform his church choir — large or small — about the recital series, and invite them to become a patron. After all business had been disposed of the meeting was adjourned, and the members assembled in the choir room for an interesting program of anthem reading. the members assembled in the choir room lor an interesting program of anthem reading. Those participating were Shirley Morgan, Vir-ginia Allen, Ray Collins. Some of the anthems selected were by Tye, Handel, Fauré, Young and Wood.

Chesapeake A recital Oct. 7 co-sponsored by the Chesa-peake Chapter, Baltimore and the First Pres-byterian Church was held under rather un-usual circumstances. While inside the church a large crowd of serious music lovers heard Gerre Hancock in recital, outside many thousands were gathered in the streets of Baltimore for a parade to honor the Oriole baseball team, the World Champions. While some of the noise of the jubilation outside spilled into the church and parking was all but impossible, the recital by Mr. Hancock was so well played that the enjoyment of this program was not at all hampered by the merry-making. Mr. Hancock's program is identical with one listed in the recital sec-tion.

EUNICE S. HEARN

Wheeling The Wheeling, W. Va. Chapter sponsored Gerre Hancock in a recital Nov. 17 at Vance Memorial Presbyterian Church on the new three-manual Möller installed this year. After the recital a reception was held in fellowship hall sponsored by the Vance Choir Guild. Jean Kittle was hostess chairman. The program is the same as one listed in the recital section. RUTH J. HAHLE

Charleston The Charleston, S.C. Chapter's annual or-ganist-clergy banquet was held Oct. 3 at the Fort Sumter Hotel. The Rev. A. James Laughlin, Jr., pastor of St. Matthews Lutheran Church, was the speaker of the evening. His remarks included predictions of the trends of church music in the coming century. The of-ficers for the coming year were introduced and the programs announced. RUTH ROOERS

Greenwood The Greenwood, S.C. Chapter met Oct. 24 in the Lander College Auditorium to hear the Lander Singers under the direction of Frederick Pravata. The group sang: Frag-ments from the Mass a cappella, Emma Lou Diemer; Thanks Be To God, Haydn-Imig; The Beatitudes, Mueller. Roberta Major an-nounced the Robert Anderson recital for Nov. 20. Dr. Paul E. Weston, Mrs. James Mickey and Mrs. Lamar Lightsey were host and hostesses.

Langlais. A festival of choirs featuring nine choirs, five organists and eight string players was held Nov. 20 at the First Baptist Church. Paul M. Hall and Robert J. Rooks directed the choirs, accompanied by Nancy Reed at the organ. The choral program included Vaughan Williams, Brahms, Hovhanass, Bechler, Berlioz, Rach-maninoff and Fetler. Helen Rickles played the prelude, Fantasie in G major, Bach; for the offertory Donald Mori played Reger's Bene-dictus, and the service concluded with Beulah Cameron playing Festival Hymn, Bartlett. Wendell Westcott Plays Dedication Recital

With a magnificent dedication recital, the new Carillon at Covenant Presbyterian Church took its place alongside other famous Verdin Carillons throughout America. Under the masterful hands of world-renowned Carillonneur Wendell Westcott, the bells played the arrangements with stirring depth, accuracy of tone, and inspiring beauty. Pastor, music director, donor, and congregation listened . . . heard a great musical achievement in bronze bells.

Someday your Church, too, may want to install a Carillon. Verdin engineers will be more than pleased to work with you in designing a carillon perfectly suited for your Church.

Merrimack Valley The Merrimack Valley Chapter held its first meeting of the season Oct. 10 at the First Parish Unitarian-Universalist Church, Bil-Parish Unitarian-Universalist Church, Bil-lerica, Mass. This was to be a Fun Night and it proved to be just that. The transcriptions and variations on such tunes as; Old 100th, God Save the Queen, Home Sweet Home and William Tell myde incredible listening. Pullip Beaudry, organist, performed these works with great skill. The quartet performed these ancient anthems with such fine interpretation and deep feeling. Mr. Boadway also desorves thanks for the explanatory notes. All were glad that present organ repertoires did not in-clude some of these numbers, and that our guad that present organ repertoires did not in-clude some of these numbers, and that our choirs were not subjected to this type of anthem. We were reminded from Mr. Boud-way's notes that Dudley Buck was a found-er of the AGO.

The Guild Student Group of the Richmond Professional Institute, granted a charter last ay, held its first two meetings Oct. 5 and 12 and its first social event Oct. 29 — a "spook May, recital". Officers for its first year are: president, Dane Woolridge; secretary, Rene Sensa-baugh; treasurer, Nancy Davies. Lawrence Robinson is faculty advisor.

The unusual Guild Student Group of the Convent of the Sacred Heart, El Cajon, Calif. is a group of young nuns shown being instructed in the skills of service playing by Constance Virtue. The group was chartered on St. Cecilia's Day (Nov. 22) three years ago and they hold monthly meetings in their beautiful chapel. In addition to student performances, their supervisor, Mrs. Virtue, offers more advanced repertory and leads discussions on hymnology, registration and the influences of ecumenical trends on congregational singing and liturgy.

Winthrop College GSG Members of the GSG of Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S. C., attended the Seventh Annual Convocation of Sacred Music Oct. 28-29 at Davidson College, Davidson, N. C. The group attended an address by Harold Gleason entitled Organ Instruction from the 15th Century to the Present, a panel discussion on Training the Church Musician, led by Jess Casey, Winthrop College, and an organ recital by Catharine Grozier at Davidson College Presbyterian Church. The following day the group heard Miss Crozier in A Discussion of the French Organ Mass with Emphasis on the Two Organ Masses of François Couperin, and a Mozart Chamber Concert at the Davidson College Presbyterian Church.

Alverno GSG It was decided at the first meeting of the Alverno College GSG, Milwaukce, Wis. that organ music, composers and organs of the English school would be the subject of this year's study. At the Nov. ? meeting, the first lecture-demonstration of this study was given. The organs of the Early Polyphonic and Post-Restoration were described and characteristic compositions of these periods were performed; composers included Tallis, Tomkins, Gibbons, Byrd, Bull, and Purcell. The activities of the group included a special meeting Oct. ? at which Mary Jane Wagner discussed form, style and compositional tech-niques of the Netherland School. Another special activity was hearing Sister M. Theo-phane, O.S.F., moderator of the group, per-form her Postlude on Old 100th, composed for the International Church Music Convention in August. Southern Baptist GSG The Nov. 1 meeting of the Guild Student Group at Southern Baptist Theological Semi-nary, Louisville, Ky. began with dinner at Lentini's Italian restaurant; the program fol-lowed at Highland Presbyterian Church where the group viewed and played the new 33-rank Austin organ. Jan Wiest, organist at the church, played an informal recital highlight-ing some of the solo stops. A trip was made Oct. 11 to the Steiner Organ Company, Louisville. Of special interest was a recently built tracker organ soon to be installed at Indiana University. The sponsor for this group is James Good, professor of organ at the seminary.

San Fernando GSG The Guild Student Group at the San Fer-nando Valley, Calif, State College held its first meeting Oct. 21. This gathering enabled the group to elect officers, talk about tenta-tive plans, and begin this year's project. The new officers will be: president, Boude Moore; secretary, Cheryl Prout; treasurer, Irene Gam-bina; correspondence, Suzanne Champion. El-frieda Baum is sponsor. The major project of the chapter will be to enable the student to receive experience working on a new pipe or-gan in one of the local churches. The first meeting consisted of an introduction to the organ. At the second meeting, three students will play a recital for the group. Following each student's performance a discussion of the music will be held. San Fernando GSG

The organ is a 1905 Casavant four-manual, bought some 10 years ago from Grace Church, Winnipeg. When the parts were uncased, a blizzard arose of such severity they had to be left exposed until the weather had abated. Many wooden pipes thus had to be taken apart, cleaned and reconstructed. All apart, cleaned and reconstructed. All this delayed the re-assembly of the in-strument some years; parts and other newly acquired pipework accumulated in barns around the farm.

Eventually there arose in the heart of the prairies an annex to the farmhouse containing a spacious, roomy concert hall. The organ is not yet complete and is subject to interchanges and modifica-tions as each year goes by. The action has been converted to electric.

An enjoyable lunch at the Vance Hotel was followed by a visit to St. Mark's Cathedral to view and hear the 75-rank, four-manual Flentrop. Most had an opportunity to play it. Appre-ciating the blaze of tone of the principal choruses, feelings were somewhat mixed about the tracker action and the rather puzzling layout of the console. The small 5-rank Baroque organ in the auditorium of the Faculty of Music Building at the University was the next center of attention. Built by G. Herald Keefer, a centre member, it was demon-

Brian Law introduced the topic with some historical notes as well re-corded excerpts from 20th century folk masses. To bring out other aspects and various view-points a panel of three grappled with the ques-tion of where the church is going musically and what the rôle of the church musician is and should be in the 20th century. Vice-Chairman Raymond Barnes was moderator and the panel-ists were the Rev. Hallam Johnston, Mrs. Ivy Hewis and Harry Hill. The panel members were interrupted and prodded by spirited dis-cussion from the assembled group of 30. Clyde Markham extended thanks to the panel for informative and stimulating expressions of opinion. Prior to refreshments, Chairman Arnold Earl spoke of our catalogue of com-positions by Canadian musicians and invited those present to browse through the many single copies made available to the centre by the publishers. On Oct. 29 the centre hosted a choir work-shop in Woodroofe United Church. The guest clinician, John Sidgwick, FRCO, Toronto, spent the morning session working on vocal techniques with a group of 45 youngsters from three Ottawa and district churches. Dr. Charles Peaker, distinguished To-ronto organist, played the opening re-cital Oct. 3 on the redesigned and en-larged Casavant organ in the New Wellington Square United Church, Bur-lington, Ont. His program is listed in the recital section.

The organ in Wellington Square Church has a history which dates from 1904. Originally built by Karn, it has been rebuilt three times. In 1938 the work was done by Morel of Casavant. In 1950 a new Casavant console was added. In 1956 the entire organ was re-placed by a new Casavant with 14 ranks of the old Karn organ retained. In 1966 the entire organ was removed from the Old Trinity United Church to the new church renamed Wellington Square, the church renamed Wellington Square, the old name of the town of Burlington, and now the name of the community located there. The work on the organ was by Dubay Organ Company, Burling-ton, Ont. The organist and choirmaster is Corden L Deurles FR CCO is Gordon L. Douglas, FRCCO.

CAN A CHOIR COLLEGE TEACH YOU TO TEACH?

Some years ago, when Westminster Choir College introduced its then new Bachelor of Music Education program, people said to us, "Westminster has al-ways trained music leaders for churches. Isn't this new music education program a radical departure for the college?"

"Not really," we explained. "Westminster Choir College has always been in the business of educating teachers. We believe no choral director can be truly effective who is not, in a real sense, a teacher."

Westminster Choir College in Princeton, New Jersey - perhaps best known for its "Westminster Choir" - is an independent, fully accredited four-year college preparing students for musical leadership in schools and churches.

Westminster offers two degree programs — one leading to the Bachelor of Music Education for those preparing to teach, the other leading to the Bache-lor of Music for those preparing for church music careers.

On the surface our curriculum may appear not to be very different from music education courses elsewhere. You'll find the familiar course listings in music and accessed studies the sensities there tind the familiar course listings in music and general studies, the practice teach-ing, the field work. But there are differ-ences at Westminster, "pluses" like sing-ing daily in some choral group, perform-ing with great orchestras under men like Bernstein, Ormandy, and Stokowski. At Westminster there's an air of participa-tion. tion.

The other day, one of our professors wrote a prospective student, "Everyone at Westminster sings; everyone learns to conduct a choir; everyone plays an instrument or learns enough about playing one to help him in his work . . . But music is not studied just for its own sake. It is studied, so that students may go out to teach and lead others."

Westminster is proud of its 48 distinguished faculty members and all they are doing to help prepare talented students for the schools and the churches of tomorrow.

OHIO ORGANIST, TEACHER SUCCUMBS TO CANCER AT 78

Ruth Whittington Roberts, 78, Spring-field, Ohio, died Oct. 23 of cancer. Mrs. Roberts was a graduate of the Conser-vatory of Music, University of Cincinnati and served churches in the Springfield area her entire life. She was organist of the Covenant Presbyterian Church in Springfield for 36 years, retiring last June. June. From 1943 to 1961 Mrs. Roberts was an instructor in organ at Wittenberg University and organ accompanist for the university choir. She went on choir trips and was heard with the choir when it performed on The Lutheran Hour. She was a patroness of Sigma Alpha Iota, national women's music honorary, and a past winner of the Springer Gold Medal awarded at the University of Cincinnati for distinguished organ playing.

VETERAN PIPEMAKER DIES IN CALIFORNIA; ALMOST 91

Ferdinand Oechsner, veteran pipe-maker, died Oct. 10, just six days be-fore his 91st birthday. He came to America from Germany before the turn of this century, having learned metal pipemaking with the old Walcker Or-gan Company in Weikersheim, Ger-many. He settled in Philadelphia for a time and was associated with the late Anton Gottfried, who later opened a factory in Erie, Pa.

late Anton Gottfried, who later opened a factory in Erie, Pa. Mr. Oechsner moved to Chicago in 1912 to become metal pipemaker with the W. W. Kimball Company where he worked until his retirement in 1942. In 1943 he and his family moved to Hollywood, Calif. where he lived until his death. He leaves two sons and three daughters as well as seven grand-children and 29 great grandchildren.

THOMAS LARIMORE PASSES IN CALIFORNIA RETIREMENT

Thomas W. Larimore, AAGO, died suddenly at the age of 77 Aug. 6 at Grand Terrace, Calif. He came to Cali-fornia eight years ago after having taught organ at the University of Minnesota for many years. For several sea-sons he served as one of the auditors of the Riverside-San Bernardino AGO ot the Riverside-San Bernardino AGO Chapter and played at two local church-es: St. Stephen's Methodist in San Bernardino and First Congregational in Highland. Survivors include two sons, a daughter and several grand-children children.

Reginald Frey Merrill died Sept. 2. Born in Willoughby, Ohio July 16, 1898, he served as organist and choirmaster of Grace Episcopal Church there at the age of 14. He studied organ with E. V. W. Heal, Can-adian organist then in Cleveland, and with Edwin Arthur Kraft. In 1921 he studied adian organist then in Cleveland, and with Edwin Arthur Kraft. In 1921 he studied at the Guilmant School in New York and served as minister of music of Van Nest Presbyterian Church and as master of the choristers of St. Martha's Episcopal Chapel. In Cleveland Mr. Merrill served Grace Episcopal Church, Church of the Incarna-tion and St. Alban's. In 1935 he joined the Halle Bros. Company as organ salesman. After amputation of his leg, he served in the company's customer information and service department until his retirement in 1954. 1954.

Mr. Merrill played under Arthur Rod-zinski, with the Cleveland Symphony and with the Clevelandaires under Rudolph Ringwald.

Mrs. Merrill, an organist and teacher, survives her husband.

THE DIAPASON E D 1 T 0 R 1 A L

The opinions, ideas and suggestions The opinions, ideas and suggestions on the editorial page are the responsi-bility of the editors of this publication and do not necessarily reflect official policies or points of view of the elected officers of either the American Guild of Organists or the Royal Canadian College of Organists and should not be construed

The Gag Is Off

The telephone calls which reported to us the proceedings of the meeting of the AGO National Council at the Detroit Club surprised us greatly. We had assumed, like anyone would have who witnessed the open council meeting at Atlanta, that that justly famous steam roller would flatten all before it and that the apparent determination to start a new monthly magazine to serve as the official journal of the AGO would have become a fait accompli by sundown the evening of November 14, 1966.

Most of us are aware by now that "What Lola wants Lola gets." After all, as they say in Chicago, you can't fight City Hall.

Minutes of the Council meeting, allegedly edited at Headquarters, will be published in our January issue. The compromise agreed upon includes a letter to be sent to deans of chapters asking opinions on the wisdom of changing representation. It should be pointed out that Council action is not bound in any way by whatever answers the deans write. This was, allegedly, clearly stated at the meeting. The official relationship between the Guild and THE DIAPASON was established more than 31 years ago by a 3 to 1 vote in a plebescite of the entire membership. Guild chapter reports started appearing in The DIAPASON regularly in 1911, 25 years before the merger of the Guild with the National Association of Organists (NAO) - a merger first suggested by THE DIAPASON, then the official NAO journal. The extent of our services to readers and the Guild over the years and the warmth of our relationships are certainly too familiar to warrant any detailed review here.

To try to keep peace in the family, THE DIAPASON has allowed itself to be "gagged". Old friends all over the country have noticed this and commented sadly upon it. We recall the special admonition given us at breakfast in a Kitchener, Ont. hotel by a leading American recitalist the morning after his brilliant recital at the 1963 RCCO National Convention: "Your primary responsibil-ity is not to National Headquarters, nor even to the Guild itself. It is to the whole profession of organists and church musicians."

If we have abrogated that responsibility, even in tense circumstances, we welcome all the more this clear directive to return to our traditional rôle of objective examiner of all sides of all questions of importance to church musicians.

We have on our desk a long list of questions our readers have posed, on which we can start open consideration. A few of these are:

What is the Guild doing in the insurance business and has anyone a personal axe to grind in this matter?

Why does anyone want the gruelling, unpaid job of president of the Guild?

Why isn't the Guild's detailed financial statement published in the same manner as that of almost every other professional organization?

Can the Guild legally, competently and economically publish another maga-zine on a monthly basis? What is the Guild's history in publication?

These are only a few of the questions our future issues will attempt to explore in depth. Our regular news columns, special articles by top professionals, recitals and, for now, chapter reports will continue.

We feel a little like the man who kept banging his head against the wall because it felt so good when he stopped. It feels so good to have that gag off!

O Clap Your Hands, All Ye People!

Psalm 47:1

Perhaps one of the great strengths of such an organization as the American Guild of Organists is the wide variety of opinions, backgrounds and convic-tions to be found among its members. So we always meet a variety of responses when we report periodically our current observations on the matter of applause at organ recitals.

We expressed our favorable reaction in 1962 to the arrangements which permitted applause at all events of the national convention in Los Angeles County. At Philadelphia and Atlanta we felt that careful indication ahead of time kept confusion about applause at a minimum.

We would like to make another contemporary contribution to discussion on the subject: the apparent softening of attitude of the Catholic church toward applause in the house of worship. At the congress in Milwaukee reported in the October issue, the postlude was applauded after each pontifical mass in the cathedral by a congregation made up largely of priests and nuns – surely signifying that an audible expression of appreciation was not considered inappropriate.

At the fine new Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in our nation's capital, the audience gathered for the recital by the Duruflés was told that the Host had been removed from the altar and that applause was invited.

We note too the increasing number of recital programs reaching our office with the notation "Applause is per-mitted" or "Please reserve applause until the end of the program." These are more and more equalling the more familiar "Please refrain from applause" notations.

We are pleased to note a trend toward the acceptance of applause at or-gan recitals in churches. Since most recitals must be played in churches, this seems to us a move toward according the organist a status more nearly that of other recitalists. Most organists, we are sure, will try hard to deserve this recognition.

Again, we know many of our readers will not feel the way we do and, as always, we welcome expressions diametrically opposed to our own.

Pony Express

The October issue and its problems tempted us to "get a horse" or at least to dust off our trusty bicycle and start delivering THE DIAPASON in the same fashion we used to deliver the Times-Record - folding it into neat little bundles and aiming it hopefully at the front porch. (Even if a few copies landed on porch roofs, this was nothing compared to the number of October issues which rested and became weatherbeaten in Chicago's main postoffice.)

Despite a brimful period of activities in late August and early September (several reported in that star-crossed October issue), the "dummy" reached the printer promptly and made its way through publication without a hitch. But . . . our addressing service, crowded by urgent postoffice regulations, selected this time to re-sort our mailing list numerically according to zip code. By using nearly a week extra to complete this monumental task, the mailers enabled those Octobers to reach the Chicago postoffice at the very height of the unprecendented jam there, in which THE DIAPASON accounted for some 23,000 of those 15 million pieces of undelivered mail which clogged midwest postal channels for about two weeks.

Of course our readers were puzzled and quite naturally added their hundreds of letters of inquiry to said 15 million pieces of undelivered mail. We are gratified and not at all surprised to report that readers, almost to a man (or woman!) were polite and genuinely concerned and assumed that our office was not to blame. When we read in our newspaper that a great mass of third class mail was being destroyed (sales and political flyers now too old to be effective) we wondered just how many of our precious October copies acci-dentally went into the same hopper.

The November issue, as you may have noticed, was back on schedule. We'll hold our breath until we know how the December issue has held its own against those billions of Christmas cards so many of us mail early to avoid the rush.

Brother's Keeper

From time to time as we process recital programs (back above the 200 mark again this month) we encounter a little practice which frankly gives us pause. We think it unlikely many of the perpetrators of this little practice have any idea of the image (there's that word again!) it projects to editorial (there's staff members preparing copy.

The matter in question is the sending in a series of recitals by different players, with all the attention focused on just one - the sender. The other recitals are either X-ed out, completely obliterated by cravon, if on separate pages torn away, or even, if on the same page, torn raggedly away leaving just raw edges of the other recital. Some people apply all these methods or various permutations or combinations of them.

What does all this say to us? Well, it could say "Nobody else is going to use my five-cent stamp but me" or "If the others want their programs printed let 'em send in their own" or "Mine was the only program that really mattered."

The people who have been observed indulging their egos thus would make a shocking and surprising list. (No indeed, we are not going to print such a list!) Apparently no recital status is too high - or too low - to preclude it.

The solution to this apparently widespread temptation is one that more and more comes into use: the sponsor of the series simply sends in the series all at once, often ahead of time. Incidentally we regularly use those X-ed out recitals in our recital pages if we can possibly decipher them - just as a matter of principle.

Perhaps strangest of all is to receive in a single day's mail, three copies of the same series, each "edited" to focus on just one of the recitalists: it has happened.

Those Were the Days

Fifty years ago the December, 1916 is-sue published the following news of interest to readers -

The big five-manual Austin in Chi-cago's Medinah Temple was dedicated Nov. 20, 21, 22. Dr. J. Lewis Browne conducted the orchestra in organ con-certos of Guilmant, Borowski and Rheincertos of Guilmant, Borowski and Rhein-berger with Wilhelm Middelschulte, Florence Hodge and Palmer Christian as soloists. Stars of the Chicago Grand Opera Company also appeared. Portland, Maine found public organ recitals in City Hall so profitable that Will C. Choral Performances

Choral performances of larger works Choral performances of larger works are beginning to come in at a rather fast pace for so early in the season and we note a few with Bach again heading the list. Bach cantatas were listed frequently and we note: 78 at United Methodist, Washington, D.C. (Peggy Kelley Rein-burg); 140 at First Presbyterian, Buffalo, N.Y. (Sourie Haskin): 50 at Concordia N.Y. (Squire Haskin); 50 at Concordia Senior College, Fort Wayne, Ind.; 68 and 103 plus motets of Bach and Brahms, Louisville Bach Society (Melvin Dickinson). We noted some Mozart: Litany in B flat at St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University (Searle Wright) and at Fox Chapel Episcopal, Pittsburgh (Bob Whitley); Laudate Dominum, First Pres-byterian, Burlington, N.C. (Robert B. King).

The Duruflé Requiem under its com-poser's direction is listed under Duruflé recitals in the recital section but there were other performances as under Henry Fusner at Church of the Covenant, Cleveland. The Fauré Requiem was noted at Chapel of the Intercession, New York City (Clinton Reid).

Among contemporary works we list Effinger's The Invisible Fire at First Methodist, Ashland, Ohio (Robert Doss), Britten's Rejoice in the Lamb at St. Andrew's, Kansas City, Mo. (Mel Bishop, Carlene Niehart), and Pinkham's Mag-nificat at Grace Church, Elmira, N.Y. (Robert M. Finster).

Letters to the Editor Mr. Weaver Answers Decatur, Ga. Oct. 18, 1966 y

Decatur, Ga. Oct. 18, 1966 y-To the Editor: I had determined not to comment on the two letters that have appeared in THE DIAPA-son, but I honestly feel that I must. It seems to me that the lime has long since past when we can measure our col-leagues' moral status on the basis of con-sumption of alcoholic beverages. Although many religious denominations do expect ab-stinance, there are a significant number that expect temperance in its literal sense instead. Thus in the greater purpose of serving the glory of God, perhaps we might exercise more tolerance of our differences in peri-pheral areas such as this. pheral areas such as this.

bergin areas such as time. By now it must be obvious even to those who did not attend the Atlanta Convention that many of both persuasions were in attend-ance. Our local group tried to adopt a policy that would be congenial to all. We did not serve spirits at any convention func-tions on the other hand, we did permit a tion; on the other hand, we did permit a cash bar to be set up in a room adjacent to the ballroom.

to the ballroom. The real question regarding convention deportment is whether there were those who behaved offensively. It was my observation that Atlanta had relatively few inconsiderate delegates in this respect. The fact (which you noted in your review) that absenteeism from programs was unusually low all week further indicates a commendable seriousness of purpose to the ideals of the Guild. The Atlanta Atlanta A G.O.

The Atlanta Chapter, A.G.O., thoroughly enjoyed hosting the convention and we were very proud of our colleagues who attended. We regret that this much attention had al-ready been focused on the all we matter. Sincerely,

VILLIAM WEAVER

Marilyn Mason in Lingland

Ann Arbor, Mich., October 11, 1966 -

Ann Arbor, Mich., October 11, 1966 — To the Editor: I have just returned from a brief but satis-fying trip to England. I had been invited to play in six English cities, and the two-week trip proved most exciting. Since less than a four-hour train trip was involved for each recital, there was plenty of time available for practice. Everywhere I was impressed by British hospitality and interest in Americans: American organ-playing, American organ-building and American composers. A former student of mine. Clark Bedford.

A former student of mine, Clark Bedford, has been organist-choirmaster at All Souls Church, Langham Place, London for the past year. Both he and his wife have been graciously received by the parish, and I was told by the vicar, and many others, of the fine contribution he is making to the mu-sical life of their church. Sincerely. Sincerely, MARILYN MASON Some Queries for Dr. Noehren Allison Park, Pa., Nov. 5, 1966 — To the Editor:

Thank you for giving those of us who were unable to attend the convention in Atlanta an opportunity to read some of the fine lec-tures that were given there. I admire greatly the fine work that Robert Noehren is doing for our profession. His fine, article, Schnitger, Cliquot and Cavaillé-Coll has some statements which L would like to guestion and comment which I would like to question and comment upon.

He says " a conductor never thinks in terms He says " a conductor never thinks in terms of changing the orchestration. But the com-poser is always concerned for the instrumental medium in the music he writes and feels no less a responsibility for determining what registration shall be in organ music he writes."

registration shall be in organ music he writes." The words "never" and "always" I believe, are too limiting, for I believe a good conductor does sometimes think or wish he could change the orchestration as does the composer some-times with his own work. The composer is not always so concerned for the instrumental medium as he is the faithful reproduction of his rhythms, melodies and harmonies.

his rhythms, melodies and harmonies. As a composer I do have very definite ideas when scoring for orchestral instruments, large-ly, I believe, because of the individual char-acteristics of these instruments in the way they attack a tone by bow, wind or striking, and in their sustaining or legato or lack of it pos-sibilities. This is not so true when composing for the organ. The action of a key is the same whether the stop pulled is a principal, flute or reed, pianissimo or fortissimo. My chief concern is that the melody lines are clear, that the harmonies are balanced, the rhythm is vital and that the overall form is in good taste and in keeping with the general indi-cations. I wonder if we do not put too much emphasis upon authenticity of registration which are contained in the notes themselves. Mr. Noehren states "Registration is defined as the art of combining the various registers of the organ appropriately to provide a tonal medium for the music to be performed." This is a big order and presents many problems of which I shall mention just a couple. For example take a G major triad in open position. The composer writes the chord with the sup-position that it will be balanced, whether pp or ff. As any organist knows this is not true in all registers of some stops or combinations of stops, and it is not uncommon today to hear full organ sounds in which the upper harmonics dominate destroying the balance. Then there is the problem of resultant tones which should re-enforce the fundamental tones, and how about the tuning of the octaves, fifths and thirds? Our tempered tuning leaves much to be desired. No wonder we so often hear about screaming mixtures today. Then too, when this same chord is used in an inversion how differ-ent it reacts to different registers and how same chord is used in an inversion how differ-ent it reacts to different registers and how careful one must be in the use of manual 16-ft stops. Just a move of a whole tone in pitch can sometimes make its use acceptable. For example play "The strife is o'er" ture Victory in several different keys using the 16-ft. manual stop with the principal chorus. Since most of the chords in this hymn are in root position it lends itself very readily to the use of a 16-ft. stop. This is not true of most hymn tunes. Then there is the problem of the melody lines. On most of our new organs the melody line of a hymn, for instance, is lost in the overtones. We hear the harmonic changes but the top voice is lost in a sea of overtones. I don't know the solution to this one but I find myself using less and less organ even when don't know the solution to this one but I find myself using less and less organ even when playing Bach fugues. What a joy it is to sometimes play a fugue using only a beautiful 8-ft. principal stop. How clean and clear and distinct the lines become!

distinct the lines become! I suggest that what we need is more refine-ment of tone, more careful tuning and more concern for the musical elements rather than so-called authenticity. We can learn much from the great builders of the past but we must re-member our first aim is to create or re-create music. So let us work towards building and de-manding instruments using new and old ideas which will best suit the requirements of the composers melodies, harmonies and rhythms. Sincerely yours. Sincerely yours,

REUEL LAHMER, A.A.G.O.

Those New Ads! Bethel Park, Pa., Oct. 10, 1966 — To the Editor: I'm positively ecstatic over the delightful "light touch" ads for Casavant, Allen, and World Library of Sacred Music, on pages 23, 29, and 35 of the October issue.

I hope many others feel likewise, so we can have lots more of the same. Sincerely,

Festival at Concordia

A Festival of the Reformation Oct. 31 Concordia Teachers College, River Forest, Ill. began with a faculty recital the preceding evening at Grace Lutheran Church at which Herbert Gotsch played the Bach Clavierübung, Book 3 (large settings) with the chorales sung by the senior choir of the church.

A convocation address by Jaroslav Pelikan, Yale University, on Tradition and Renewal in Lutheran Worship opened Monday proceedings at Geise-man Gymnasium. Music was one of the principal facets highlighted in the stimulating address.

Two musical programs featured the music of Richard W. Wienhorst, Val-paraiso University. The program of choral and instrumental works was per-formed by the chapel choir of Concordia directed by Carl F. Schalk, and the choir of the parish school directed by Paul B. Bouman. The final vespers utilized Dr. Wienhorst's setting of the service sung by the Kapelle directed by Thomas E. Gieschen. Gieschen.

At a panel discussion on Composing for the Lutheran Service, Drs. Pelikan and Weinhorst were joined by Carl F. Halter and Richard Hillert with Paul Bunjes as moderator.

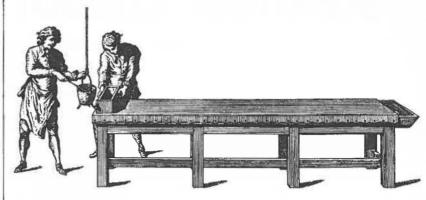

Musicians of many faiths from a wide area attended.

THE LUTHERAN ORDER FOR VESPERS in musical settings was given twice Nov. 6 at part of the Lutheran Fine Arts Festival at St. Luke's Lutheran, Chicago, with Victor Hildner conducting the festival choir and Grigg Fountain at the organ.

because many operations in the building of a pipe organ can best be done in the traditional ways Dom Bedos described and illustrated. That is why we have preserved, jealously, these time honored methods of construction. We cast our pipe metal, and make our pipes, almost exactly as they were made in Dom Bedos' day ... but we use an ultrasonic device to wash them.

A visit to our plant will show you many such instances where hand crafting is combined with the most modern techniques and engineering concepts wherever these are compatible with the traditional nature of the instrument. They result in organs of unexcelled quality.

Part 2 - The French Organ of the 17th Century

by ROBERT NOEHREN

The organ in France was as different I from the Schnitger organ as a Frenchman is from a German. By the end of the 17th century and the time of François Couperin, the French organ had become a beautiful and colorful instrument completely reflecting its na-tional taste. Of course, it had much in tional taste. Of course, it had much in common with the German organs, yet it was so different in its colors and in the way it was used, that a German organist visiting a French organ could find him-self in difficulty if called upon to per-form some of the larger forms of Ger-man organ music of the day. In form there was a resemblance to the German Organ List main work or Gread Organ organ. Its main work or Grand Orgue (the equivalent of the German Hauptwerk) like the German organ, was situ-ated on the floor of the west gallery contained in a main case. Similarly, it contained in a main case. Similarly, it was complimented by a smaller case hanging in a forward position from the gallery rail containing the Positif, as it was called in France. Here most of the resemblance to the German organ ends, for the Grand Orgue and Positif divi-sions of the old French organ were the only large and complete divisions. There were never more than two, three or four registers in the Pedal and these were lo-cated together with the Grand Orgue in the main case. A third manual division, known as the Recit, had but a few registers playable only from middle C upward, and in many organs there was registers playable only from middle C upward, and in many organs there was only one register, a Cornet. This divi-sion also took its place with the Grand Orgue in the main case. Occasionally there was a fourth manual division, known as the Echo, but this like the Recit contained only a few registers play-able in the treble and located again in Recit contained only a few registers play-able in the treble and located again in the main case. Until the 18th century, the French did not build very large organs as could be found in North Europe. The average organ of two or three manuals was almost completely a standard instrument, even more so than was typical of German organs. Even the name of each of its registers symbolized name of each of its registers symbolized at once its family, color and pitch. One organ was like another in its form, the character of its tone, and the disposi-tion of its registers. In fact, it is quite possible to draw up an imaginary dis-position and discover that it varies little position and discover that it varies little when compared with the organs one might find from church to church in that day. Moreover, the organ music of the day dictated the registration to be used, for it was the custom of the com-poser to indicate in his scores the appro-priate registers. For instance, basic flute registers were called Bourdons; there were Bourdons 16' and 8' on the Grand Orgue and a Bourdon 8' on the Grand Orgue and a Bourdon 8' on the Positif. The presence of these registers in their proper places was absolutely indispen-sible for the performance of the organ music of the day. The organ builder of music of the day. The organ builder of the day did not have the license to substitute a Quintadena or a Holflute in place of one of these Bourdons as a variation from what would seem to be the monotony of always having the same color. He had an obligation to build each organ like all the other organs to function properly in the other organs to function properly in the performance of music. The French organ was nearly as standard as an orchestra. It is quite appropriate then to illustrate the form of this instrument by presenting an imaginary disposition. (see stoplist)

The principal registers of this organ consist of the Montre, at 16' and 8' pitches. These are the foundation regis-ters and the largest pipes stand in the facade of the main case. The Prestant facade of the main case. The Prestant is the Octave at 4' pitch and the Doub-lette the Octave at 2' pitch. There are usually two mixtures, the Fourniture at normal pitch and the Cymbale at a higher pitch. Each of these mixtures usually has from four to five ranks. The Cymbale of the French organ bears no resemblance to the Cymbel of the Ger-man organ but is more akin to its Scharf mixture in color and pitch. It functions as a mixture in the principal Scharf mixture in color and pitch. It functions as a mixture in the principal chorus, or what is called in France the Plein jeu, whereas the Cymbel in the German organ is a color register. The Positif has virtually the same chorus and registers as the Grand Orgue, except for the 16' Montre and 16' Bourdon. This Plein jeu of the Positif is a course Plein jeu of the Positif is of course scaled smaller, and the pitches are high-er to produce a somewhat sharper and more brilliant sound than on the Grand Orgue. Like the German organ, the position of the two chief divisions helps to emphasize further the difference between the two choruses.

The wide-scaled groups of both Grand Orgue and Positif are usually quite com-pletc. Like the family of principals, the names of the registers are associated with an appropriate pitch and function. The 16' and 8' stopped and chimney flutes are always called Bourdons, the 2-2/3' is a Nazard, the 2' a Quarte de Nazard, and the 1-3/5' a Tierce. There is always a five-rank Cornet running upward from middle C on the Grand Orgue, and it is often repeated on the Positif. The entire gamut of wide-scaled registers of the Grand Orgue is also found on the Positif with the addition of the 1-1/8', a Larigot, and the omis-sion of the Bourdon 16'. The reeds of the French organ have always been something special, and they were particulaty so on the areat. The wide-scaled groups of both Grand

The reeds of the French organ have always been something special, and they were particularly so on the early French organs, with a very intense, splashing color. Full-length reeds and short-resonator reeds always appear on the Grand Orgue and the Positif; Trompettes at 16', 8' and 4' pitches on the Grand Orgue 8' and 4' pitches on the Grand Orgue and at 8' and 4' on the Positif, a Voix Humaine on the Grand Orgue and the Cromhorne on the Positif. It is curious to note that the Pedal

It is curious to note that the Pedal organ never develops as a great bass instrument in the French organ or in the other South Europe instruments un-til the 19th century. The Pedal of the early French organs contained never more than two flutes at 8' and 4' pitches and two trompettes at 8' and 4' pitches, and these were mainly used for playing simple melodies or Gregorian tunes with simple melodies or Gregorian tunes with the feet. At other times the pedal board was used to play the bass of the Grand Orgue by means of a coupler. The Récit was strictly a solo organ, as its name implies. Sometimes it had two or three registers, including a small reed and a flute, but more frequently it contained only a Cornet of five ranks with the pitches at 8', 4', 2-2/8', 2' and 1-3/5'. In larger instruments there was still another manual division, the Echo. still another manual division, the Echo, which functioned much like the Récit.

which functioned much like the Récit. With the knowledge of this typical disposition, an organist can easily grasp some feeling for the way this French organ functioned simply by studying the organ works of Francois Couperin, in which the composer has indicated the registration for each composition. How-ever, many of the terms used represent registrations consisting each of several registers. These recipes were commonly known to all organists of the day, such known to all organists of the day, such as Plein jeu, Grand jeu, Tierce en taille, or Recit de Cornel. The term, Tierce en taille, indicated to the organist that he was to play a melody in the tenor or Recit de Cornel. The term, Tierce en taille, indicated to the organist that he was to play a melody in the tenor with the Bourdon 8', Prestant 4', the Nazard, Quarte de Nazard and the Tierce, and to accompany this solo with one or two 8' registers in the right hand. The term, Plein jeu, indicated that the principal choruses of the Grand Orgue and Positif coupled were to be drawn. A Petite plein jeu indicated the use of the Positif chorus. The wide-scaled mutations and the cornets were particularly characteristic of the French organ and were used in many ways. The Voix Humaine and Cromhorne were unique solo instru-ments quite unlike their counterpart in the German organ. But it was the bril-liant Trompettes that were the glory of this organ and which created the eclat of the Grand jeu. Unlike the German trumpets which were used to help inte-grate the Organo Pleno, the French reeds were never drawn together with the choruses of the Plein jeu. Strangely were never drawn together with the choruses of the Plein jeu. Strangely enough, it was the Cornet alone which was drawn with the reeds to intensify their particular color and help strengthen the trebles.

their particular color and help strength-en the trebles. The organ music of France before the 19th century requires the variety of vivid colors so typical of its instrumentation even more so than the music of Ger-many. It also requires a form in which its various registers can be so disposed as to make performance practical. For instance, the repetition of the mutations and cornets is necessary in the perform-ance of trios and duos in which the coloring of the Tierce is required on two manuals. There are few organs outside France which have more than a token of the appropriate colors to provide the necessary tonal medium for a con-vincing performance of early French or-gan music. Not All Organ Lofts Look Alike!

This Is Ours!

This disc is our organ loftmeticulously engraved waveforms for every note of every stop in the Electro-Voice Series D organs. Waveforms identical to those produced by some of the world's most distinguished pipes.

There is a pipe sound in the Series D for every note of every rank of the organ. And each stop is additive, duplicating the philosophy of the finest pipe organs. Press a key. Select a tab. This is what you'll hear:

Organ Music

Music for manuals alone seems to be Music for manuals alone seems to be gaining favor as clear ensembles and bright voicing make two and three part counterpoint attractive listening again. Not only are the manuals-only composi-tions of the Baroque era appearing more and more frequently on recitals but con-temporary composers for the organ are returning to a purity of sound and de-sign which manualiter pre-supposes. Such music dominates our organ music receipts this month.

sign which manualiter pre-supposes. Such music dominates our organ music receipts this month. This kind of writing is especially at-tractive in works of composers strongly influenced by contemporary German counterpoint. A well-made set of Three Fantasies by Rudolph Kremer (Elkan-Vogel) and Gerhard Krapf's chorale pre-lude All Praise to Thee, Eternal God (Augsburg) are examples. About half of the Six Canzonettas for manuals only by Noel Goemanne (H. T. FitzSimons) are light textured counterpoint; the remain-der are very simple harmonic style with some modal influences. George Brandon's Variations on Five Plainsong Hymntunes (Augsburg) are likewise for manuals only and profit likewise from similar contrapuntal and modal influences; their unmeasured rhythms add to their flavor. Extensive sections of Four Nativity Tableaux by Paul Sifler (H. W. Gray) are for manuals alone. Melodic ornamen-tation in a kind of Baroque style, some pleasant free canonical counterpoint and reference to, rather than quotation of, tation in a kind of Baroque style, some pleasant free canonical counterpoint and reference to, rather than quotation of, carol tunes add up to good effect. Even volume 39 of The California Organist, a Partita by Norberto Guinal-do on a tune by Alexander Schreiner, eschews pedals almost completely until the final variation (variation 3 has a long pedal point); this is a playable and attractive work. — FC

Lillipops!

On another page we report briefly on The Organ in Sanity and Madness, a money-raising bit of hilarity which the usually more staid Royal College of Organists staged in Albert Hall in Lon-don. (We wait eagerly for a promised recording of this). But fun programs are not at all con-fined to England. We receive copies of such programs by North Americans very often too.

This is only the second time an electronic has recorded with a pipe.

(Allen was chosen the first time, too.)

Several months ago, in Philadelphia, duo-organists Earl Ness and William Whitehead wrote another page of musical history. In what many people described as a "major musical event" they presented their second concert of music for two organs.

For this special program, organists Ness and Whitehead alternated between a classic-voiced, two-manual Allen and a 55-rank pipe organ.

The concert was beautifully recorded and the album is already being called a collector's item.

Christmas music continues in our stacks from choral publishers. Some of it is simple enough for last minute in-sertion into 1966 programs. H. W. Gray sends two sets for Christ-mas, an SATB set of Two Christmas Carols by Edward Kerr (Sweet was the Song with soprano solo and A Boy was Born with tenor) and an SSA set of Four Christmas Carols arranged by Ron-ald Arnatt (A Great and Mighty Won-der, Angels from the Realms of Glory, Up! Who shortchanges the musical service?

More people than you imagine! ... and often simply through lack of knowledge about the pipe organ — one of church worship's principal components. The pipe organ should not be considered as an adjunct to a new church building; it's as basic as space, floors, walls and roof, and ideally should be planned when they are planned. The knowledgeable organist knows this, but many non-musical members of building committees do not. Better tell them — their ignorance could shortchange your musical service!

The work is for two choruses, a small concertino one and a large one, and solo soprano. The style is essentially late 18th century German. Kodály's famed choral method is being issued by Boosey and Hawkes in an edition by Percy M. Young. Program planning should be one of the most creative tasks an organist

Program planning should be one of the most creative tasks an organist undertakes as he looks forward to a single recital or a concert series. No matter how perfect the technique, how masterful the interpretation, a poorly planned program has set its own limits before the ink is dry on the draft copy. What, then, makes for good pro-gram planning? The variables are many when one considers the popular appead of big names regardless of the merit of the program itself, he can understand why many musicians consider a well-planned program secondary to perform-ing a group of virtuoso pieces to dazzle the public. Although the organ in our country has not had the drawing power of a large captive audience every Sun-day morning in our churches. What better place to put into effect princi-ples of good program planning by working out carefully the organ music mation and congregation we serve, time of the church year, variety in styles and operiods of composition, intrinsic worth of each piece of music, and at-tention to the relationship of the mu-viding an appropriate opening and losing. closing.

Since many of those who attend organ recitals tend to be rather sophisticated since many of those who attend organ recitals tend to be rather sophisticated in their tastes, careful planning on a large scale must be carried out for a recital. Here is where an organist can summon all his intellectual knowledge, combine it with a keen artistic sense. and come up with a program which will satisfy the mind as well as the emotions of his listeners. The organ has a vast amount of literature extending from the 15th century to the present day, and every organist has an obliga-tion to learn as large a cross section of the various periods and schools as pos-sible. Finally, after an organist con-siders the resources and limitations of the instrument he will be playing, the probability for presenting a program of educational and artistic value is now at a u.cximum. at a 1..eximum.

All too many programs tend to be a potpourri of styles, periods, and schools. If variety is the spice of life, variety is certainly available within the works of a single great composer such as J. S. Bach, within a school of organ composition such as the Spanish, within a period such as the contemporary, and within an artificial category such as nuptial music.

nuptial music. How refreshing to formulate a pro-gram on a unifying theme such as one of the preceding. It is now, indeed, that an organist is challenged to ex-pand his own acquaintance beyond the standard works to some of the lesser known and played monuments of the past and present. With such a vast literature available, few program themes would ever have to be dropped for lack of really worthwhile music. This brings us to the planning of a

This brings us to the planning of a program scries, be it the monthly meet-ings of a Guild chapter, a church vesper series, or a scries of recitals in a college or other teaching situation. In this plan-ning phase an organist can exploit his role as educator and artist, for the possibilities of educating the audience in the marvelous wealth of material available on the organ are limitless.

available on the organ are limitless. Whatever the concerts or programs, any series can profit from a common theme whether presented by a single organist, several college students, vari-ous concert artists, or assorted soloists, choral, and instrumental groups. All too often a program committee sits down to gather together ideas about the best performers and most interest-ing programs available for the year. How much more meaningful if it could formulate a theme for the entire year How much more meaningful if it could formulate a theme for the entire year or series and tie all the programs to-gether; new ideas for music and pro-grams would come to mind, publicity material would be easier to organize and write, and the audience would feel the satisfaction of having gained some new insight from music presented ac-cording to a particular theme. What we are actually doing is employing the same educational principles most school teachers take into account in preparing teachers take into account in preparing

by ELFRIEDA BAUM

Mrs. Baum was program chairman for the Los Angeles AGO Chapter for two years. In order to illustrate how these ideas may be put into effect, the writer would like to offer examples from her would like to offer examples from her own experience. In planning a vesper scries at her church, she met with her minister and choir director to evaluate the previous year's programs. The sea-sonal programs, special music for Ad-vent, Christmas, Lent, and Easter, were the easiest and first to be scheduled. The opening program of the year in October is a crucial and a difficult one to plan. Incorporating the idea of the Reformation, it was decided to go a step farther and present the new Presbyterian Order of Worship for the Lord's Day to the congregation in an afternoon vesper service. The idea of the "new" lent itself well to the pre-sentation of contemporary American the "new" lent itself well to the pre-sentation of contemporary American organ music for the prelude, while the idea of the return to a more liturgical form of worship used in the past en-abled the choir to sing the Brahms mo-tor them had here propring Brahms? tet they had been preparing. Brahms' Prelude and Fugue in G minor for the postlude carried out the style of the choral music. One of the last year's most successful concerts featured music for wed-dings and was presented in conjunc-tion with the Los Angeles AGO Chap-ter. The program was divided into three tion with the Los Angeles AGO Chap-ter. The program was divided into three parts consisting of Music for the Pre-lude, Music for the Choir, and Music for the Processional. Variety was pos-sible in each section since the organ featured music of the baroque and con-temporary periods in various styles and dynamic levels, and the Calvin Boy-choir sang examples of wedding songs accompanied by two violinists. It seemed natural to joke about a sequel to this program, namely Music for Funerals, but after the joking was over and the topic was discussed more seriously, the new Presbyterian Book of Common Worship gave a clue to a positive approach in its "Witness to the Resurrection." This service consists mainly of Scripture readings; many of these passages have been set to music and could be sung rather than spoken. The form for such a vesper seemed obvious: organ music appropriate for the prelude including music of both a memorial and resurrection spirit, the Scriptures read and interpreted by so-loists and quartet, appropriate con-Scriptures read and interpreted by so-loists and quartet, appropriate con-gregational hymns ending with "O God, Our Help" and the Bach St. Anne Fugue in conclusion.

At this stage of our planning, a theme for the whole year's concerts seemed evident. Worship through Mu-sic is a broad title, but that is exactly what our vesper series would be at-tempting to provide for the congrega-tion. It would be a theme we could use to advertise the whole series and then later use to help spotlight each concert. It was not hard to fill out the rest of the year with programs having this goal. A program in April featuring the organ and instruments would ac-complish it just as well as the choir's presentation of the traditional St. Paul by Mendelssohn. Exemplifying another type of plan-ning, Professor Robert Tusler invited several organists to participate in a Premier Series of concerts on the new Abbott and Sieker organ at the Uni-

Premier Series of concerts on the new Abbott and Sieker organ at the Uni-versity Lutheran Chapel across from the University of California at Los Angeles. Each organist was asked to choose a country and limit himself to music before Bach and of the contem-porary period. This writer chose Ger-man music and formed a very satisfy-ing program around P raetorious, Schlick, Isaak, Scheidt, Distler, Reda, Roeseling, and Raphael. It was a diffi-cult task to narrow the composers down to those listed. The music was fresh and the response of the audience en-thusiastic. thusiastic.

and the response of the audience en-thusiastic. As another example of this kind of planning, the writer, who is in charge of organ instruction at UCLA this year, is organizing noon organ recitals on campus featuring the music of all per-iods of the various national schools. She herself is preparing programs of Scan-dinavian, Spanish, Italian, and Ameri-can organ music. The students are be-ing encouraged to plan programs also centered on a national theme, especially the more popular French and German schools. In a university situation such programs appeal to students and fac-ulty and lend themselves to publicity. The language departments are fre-quently delighted to co-operate in pub-

The language departments are fre-quently delighted to co-operate in pub-licizing these concerts. Possibilities of unifying themes are limitless. A series centered around Bach would be delightful: Predecessors of Bach, Contemporaries of Bach, the Bach Family, Students of Bach, Bach's In-fluence on Contemporary Music. A series of AGO recitals using differ-ent organs could easily feature recitals fluence on Contemporary Music. A series of AGO recitals using differ-ent organs could easily feature recitals stressing music for a small two-manual organ, music for a large church instru-ment, music for a large concert hall instrument, music for a romantic style organ, music for a neo-baroque organ, and even music for a theater organ. Problems of handling these various types of instruments, differences in their construction, and the acoustical re-quirements for each could be discussed as part of the after-dinner meetings. This is truly when the fun begins. The necessity of combing through old and new music to find just the right selections to provide a well-rounded program on one of these themes is good for all of us. Usually music chosen and learned for such a program can be used in many other ways later. It keeps us from becoming stale organists and is the best education we can pro-vide ourselves as we delve into music of styles and periods with which we

and is the best education we can pro-vide ourselves as we delve into music of styles and periods with which we may not yet feel too well acquainted. No organist, regardless of his profici-ency, can afford to stop studying and practicing Practicing. Although none of the ideas in this article is new or original, it is not often enough that one sees many of often enough that one sees many of them put into effect. Buxtehude cer-tainly charmed Bach with his Advent Vesper Series in Lübeck, and we can feel fairly certain that the program-ming must have been stimulating to capture the young Bach's interest. Per-haps we need to take a longer look at modern programming practices in order to capture a larger segment of the public and to re-establish the organ as today's King of Instruments.

THE SIGHT AND SOUND OF FINE MUSIC

In one beautiful instrument—the Baldwin Model 11. Typical of Baldwin's concern for the needs of the organist, it offers a contemporary tonal design and traditional tone ideally suited for the performance of the entire repertoire of magnificent organ music. Standard controls and dimensions, solid diapason and flute ensembles, and exquisite strings and reeds are among the characteristics that have made Baldwin the choice of leading churches and institutions the world over—from New Zealand, Mexico, Portugese East Africa and other far away lands to well-known churches, cathedrals and colleges throughout the United States. CHORAL TECHNIQUES FOR THE TWENTIETH CENTURY by GEORGE N. MAYBEE Organist and choirmaster St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, Ont.

Delivered at Westminster Choir College, Princeton, N.J.; at College of Church Musicians, Washington, D.C., and at the RCCO Regional Convention at Barre, Ont.

This comprehensive title covers a very wide area, but with the limitation of time at our disposal I propose to speak on three areas of choral work: The Choirmaster and His Opportuni-ties; The Choir and its Singers; and, Music and its Choice. My remarks are intended to be practical rather than technical, and are based not only on study but on personal experiences and observations. observations.

In introducing these subjects, I think it is fair to say that while active and interested in all forms of music educainterested in all forms of music educa-tion, I am primarily a church musician of Anglican background. In my very early years I was organist and choir-master of a Presbyterian church, so have also had some experience in this area of church life. My remarks will be directed chiefly to the church musician with perhans an Anglican bias but will with perhaps an Anglican bias, but will, I hope, apply to music and choirs of all communions, as well as to secular choral music. Through its long and varied history, Western Europe has contributed much to the economic and cultural life of the human race. Probably the most unique offering made by England has been in the realm of music in worship; for by offering made by England has been in the realm of music in worship: for by the development of the type of choir usually found in the Anglican cathedrals and Collegiate churches and the vast treasures of fine music written through the centuries by its composers, devotion has been stimulated, and the art of music enhanced. What has been true, and is true of England — both in the past and present — is now also true in some measure in the United States and Canada. There are some excellent choirs. and some fine institutions of music learning are flourishing. I am sure you will all agree that the battle for an active choral tradition on this contin-ent has by no means been won, although a healthy start has been made. I did not come here to sing the praises of Eng-land's music, glorious as it may be, but I do wish there were more places where one could drop in on any week-day afternoon and hear the great music of Christian worship being sung to the greater glory of God and to the edifi-cation of the worshipper. Britain is facing her problems in church music, we know, but she is also retaining some-thing quite unique in the world of choral church music.

The Choirmaster and His Opportunities

To appreciate the past and to know the present is essential if we are to di-rect our course in matters musical for the future. This future rests in your hands as choral conductors and under the future. This future rests in your hands as choral conductors and under your guidance will develop the very essence of our future of choral music! All of this is embodied in the person of so many and of such varied titles — choirmaster, master of music, musical di-rector, minister of music, choir leader are but a few. Title is very important; for no matter which is chosen, it is one that must denote and indicate leader-ship. Nothing could be more true or should be taken more seriously, for this is the person who creates the choir. In an age of computers, statisticians, jet propulsion — all part of our twen-tieth century jargon — nothing can automatically or in any other way take the place of the inspired choirmaster. Personality is so important: here is the man or woman who, if he or she is to succeed, can and must attract, recruit, train and mould the singers. I say "mould" because there is and must be a complete and absolute training of the "mould" because there is and must be a complete and absolute training of the singer in every aspect of the production of musical sounds. This is a demanding and, above all, a disciplined thing; in-volving correct stance, proper breathing, good tone production, careful tuning, clarity of words and finally, the singing of musical phrases and passages welded into what can be a musical perform-ance.

ance. Those to whom I speak must hear much of choir psychology. It is a term to which I am not attracted and falls in the same category as "choral clini-cian" — rather antiseptic!! However, call it what you will, it is that certain something ("genius", "spark", "flare", "personality" — all these things and many more that are impossible to put into words) enable persons to direct singers so as to form them into a choir.

singers so as to form them into a choir. What must a good choir trainer have as a firm background? (It's so hard to put into words and words are so diffi-cult to put into actions). Obviously a sound musical knowledge in a technical sense, a practical knowledge of the hu-man voice and how to train it, an able key-board facility, an enjoyment of people, with a touch, please, of a sense of humor, good taste in a choice of music — all these things are pre-requi-sites of a good choral conductor. We shall discuss choice of music later, but at this point I cannot refrain from asksites of a good choral conductor. We shall discuss choice of music later, but at this point I cannot refrain from ask-ing why so often good work is wasted on music not worth doing. One does wonder why! Some vears ago while I was attending a piano recital by a world famous pianist, in the company of Dr. Healey Willan, the good doctor so truly remarked, that some of the works we heard, even though written by Schu-mann or Chopin, would never have been performed had they not been written by a "name composer". To return to our ideal choirmaster: call it drive or determination, it is that unrelenting vigour, in this easy soft age, that lefs nothing daunt him in creating a good choral ensemble, and from it the sounds that he alone is seeking to hear. Can this technique and flair be taught or is it "caught"? I think it is both taught and "caught", though I am certain the spark of personality must be there even though modestly hidden. We all know many of the most learned and eminent scholars who are so far ahead of most of us in accumulated knowledge and and caught, though 1 am certain the spark of personality must be there even though modestly hidden. We all know many of the most learned and eminent scholars who are so far ahead of most of us in accumulated knowledge and vet who cannot impart this knowledge to others in their role as teachers or lecturers. Choirmasters must communi-cate at all times with their singers. We easily recognize excellent organists and fine musicians who give little to their choirs because their prime interest is in playing the organ. A proper balance of these two interests, choir and organ is an important feature. The late Sir Sydnev Nicholson, founder of the Royal School of Church Music, and formerly organist of Westminster Abbey, aptly says, in his book Quires and Places where They Sing that church musicians should be called Choirmaster and Or-ganist not by the usual reversed tile. The office of choirmaster is, and must be the chief of the combined offices if the choir is to have its rightful place. This is not to under-rate the importance of the organist's place, but rather to place it in its proper perspective, the essential place of leadership being in the hands of the choirmaster. I commend this book of Sir Sydney Nicholson to you, now in its third edition, and pub-lished by S.P.C.K., if you do not already know it.

lished by S.P.C.K., if you do not already know it. The 1960's is certainly the age of equipment, and anyone involved in edu-cation is fully aware of the increasingly vast sums of money that are spent in this area. That good equipment is most helpful no one would deny, but it can be carried to extremes. A good choir can be had with a minimum of fancy equipment, and it is the unwise church that bases its hopes for a good choir on all the extras of a fancy rehearsal room and other non-essential facilities. It has been said that we North Ameri-cans have in some places spent more for our church music and received less in return than in any area in the world. in return than in any area in the world. Whether this is true or false, it is the avoidance of such a folly that we should be concerned with in our own individual be concerned with in our own individual situations. Basic equipment should in-clude a good sized bright rehearsal room, large enough to have some rever-beration, devoid of accoustic tile or wall beration, devoid of accoustic tile or wall board, and with a good piano. True, music desks are a wonderful help and the lighting should be such that no strain is placed on the singers to see the music. Perhaps at this point more should be said about the acoustics of the places where choirs rehearse and sing services. I am convinced that the great success of many of the choirs of Europe and Britain is due in large measure to the fact that they sing in live resonant buildings. Hard. clean, reflective surfaces make the sound live. The so-called "comfortable pew" and its attending features of endless miles of carpet in so many of our churches have done more to kill the sounds of good music both from the organ and choir than any other source. Choirmasave done more to kin the sounds of good music both from the organ and choir than any other source. Choirmas-ters must do all they can to prevent further installation of rugs, carpets, cushions and all other sound-absorbing comforts that destroy the very life of choral work. Sound tile or other absor-bent materials now ever present in lec-ture halls, class rooms, and corridors are the arch-enemies of the choral sound. Stone walls, hard-surfaced plaster walls are by far the best for singing. Over the last 25 years my own cathedral choir has sung in over one hundred dif-ferent churches, cathedrals and audi-toriums not only in Canada and the United States, but in some of the lead-ing cathedrals of Britain. The moment the choir sings its first chord you and United States, but in some of the lead-ing cathedrals of Britain. The moment the choir sings its first chord vou and the singers know what type of building and acoustics will have to be faced. All and acoustics will have to be faced. All too frequently, in fact I am sure in at least 80% of all the 100 and more buildings in which we have sung, the acoustics have been poor or of such a nature as to be of no aid to the choral ensemble. Choirmasters of the future may well do much to remedy this by insisting that buildings be more "live" for sound. Nothing can inspire the church musi-cian like a visit to hear a good choir in insisting that buildings be more "live" for sound. Nothing can inspire the church musi-cian like a visit to hear a good choir in rehearsal and performance. Again, all too often, we only hear our own work and perhaps not too objectively. It even helps to hear sometimes what not to do in the matter of choral techniques, and we may suddenly hear and see that we ourselves have fallen into the very same or similar pitfalls. Dullness and wasting of time is so common, and often we ourselves are quite as guilty without being aware. Are your rehearsals some-thing you, as the director, look forward to with interested anticipation and pleasure, or are they a bore with a "Blue-Monday" approach? If this is so, how can we expect the choir to be keen and bubbling with zest for singing? The prepared choirmaster is always organized: no detail is too small for his attention. The music is planned and placed ready in folders so work can begin at once. So often time is lost in lack of preparation. This is an age of increasing competi-tion for people's time. No one is more aware of this than anyone engaged in music education — secular or sacred — people are pressed for time. Here again, it is up to the choirmaster. "The musical product" and it is a product. can be so presented that the singer feels the time spent is well worth-while. People can always find time to do what they really want, and if the work of the choir is giving true choral satisfaction the singer will readily respond to demands for more of his time, precious though it may be. No rules can or should be given for how rehearsals and the time available may be. No rules can or should be given for how rehearsals and the time available should be used. It is most interesting to how rehearsals and the time available should be used. It is most interesting to see how others use as well as abuse or waste time. So many directors bore the singers by endless talking. How annoy-ing it is to singers alwavs to be repeat-edly stopped and corrected over minor points. Many directors find it best to allow the choir to sing through a num-ber; the director then notes the points of correction, all at one time; and then the corrected version is attempted. Re-cently a visiting conductor truly annoyed my own choir by constant stopping and starting and never letting them sing. A good basic rule is "more singing and less talking", especially as the proficiency of the singers increases. Having visiting conductors take a re-hearsal and even a performance can be extremely good and it is amazing how this can increase, not only interest and attention on the part of your singers, but also makes them much more adapt-able to different interpretations of the able to different interpretations of the music, in both tempos and styles. Over the years it has been my own good for-ture to have a series of eminent choral men rehearse my own choir, and always both the choir and I, learn a great deal in the way of different approaches. in the way of different approaches. After all, let us remember, no one has all the answers in any field of art. No remarks on choral technique would be complete without some reference to be complete without some reference to the tone or actual sound that the singers produce. I am convinced that many choir trainers accept the sounds the singers produce naturally, without any attempt at tone building and improving the actual quality. A treatise on tone and the ideal tone could fill many pages. Certainly one must have a "sound picand the ideal tone could fill many pages. Certainly one must have a "sound pic-ture" in one's mind. One must know mentally what kind of sound one ex-pects a singer to make before seeking to have it produced. This is as true of training adults as it is of children and young people.

Different countries and even differ-ent areas of the same country will each produce different kinds of choral tone. Each of us must have our preference and it is not for me to say what kind Each of us must have our preference and it is not for me to say what kind of tone one should endeavor to produce. Sir William McKie, formerly organist of Westminster Abbcy, whom many of you have heard speak, has said that "The choir's tone should be designed for the building in which it functions". I am sure there is truth in this but I cannot agree that the tone one hears from some choirs would suit any building let alone the one in which it normally sings and rehearses. This is an appeal to have, in your mind, standards of the kinds of sound you wish to hear from the choir and then, by all the means at your dis-posal, to endeavor to train your singers to produce this sound. Many of us, I am sure, would like to be able to hear a "play-back" or recording of the sing-ing and sounds made by some of what must have been famous choirs of other ages. Imagine hearing Palestrina's choir of the Sistine Chapel; the Chapel Royal Choir of England under Henry Purcell doing some lively Restoration music; an early male-voice choir of Trinity Church, Wall St., New York, or one of the first great choirs of the Mormon Tabernacle. How exciting it would be! All Different, we can be sure, and, in some cases, per-haps not as good as we might have How exciting it would be! All Different, we can be sure, and, in some cases, per-haps not as good as we might have imagined. This is a fascinating thing to contemplate, and like the great dinner party of which Van Loon wrote, one can conjecture, and speculate only on how it all might have sounded. Tonal comparison, however, is today extremely easy, and there is an abundance of re-cordings of the greatest variety of choirs both good and bad, from which one can learn a great amount. Every choral conboth good and bad, from which one can learn a great amount. Every choral con-ductor should listen to many and dif-ferent choral sounds. It is not only a worthy hobby but also a most valuable study in comparative choral sounds. Following comparison of choral sounds comes comparison of choral style, clean-ness and precision of attacks and re-leases, clarity of words and general musical effect. So much can be learned from listening that I rank this as a vital form of choral instruction.

The Choir and Its Singers

The Choir and Its Singers A history of singing and singers would indicate that our present period offers as many types of choirs and combina-tion of singers as at any time in any age. William Byrd in his Treatise on the Value of Singing, written in the 16th century, so beautifully summed it all up when he said, "Since singing is so good a thing/I would that all men would learn to sing." We echo agree-ment with this idea, even if it is no for Byrd's. There has however, been a huge increase in the number of people who sing, although I am not certain that we can always be sure that because whete the so-called Mutiple Choir

System. This idea, often carried to ex-treme lengths, is a sort of Cradle-to-the-Grave choral programme ranging from a "Cherub" choir to toddlers so young they cannot read words, let alone do much singing, to the dear "oldsters" who might be kindly and graciously al-lowed to listen or to sing discreetly from the pews. There has also been a wider use of boys to sing the treble part in mixed choirs in many areas in North America, and in some cases a strong revival of the male choir of boys and men is evidenced. I deliberately refrain from using the overworked phrase of Boy Choir, so commonly used in the United States. In any case, more people are singing, but it now becomes inevi-United States. In any case, more people are singing, but it now becomes inevi-table that we should ask how well. Knowing one of the basic reasons for the multiple choir system is to involve as many people as possible, we must commend its use, but at the same time sound a note of warning that so often this system fails in a musical sense be-cause the singers do not have enough training, rehearsals, or enough opportu-nity to sing services in church. It is impossible for one person to train half a dozen choirs and have them all first-rate from a musical point of view. Mass rate from a musical point of view. Mass instruction can often be superficial in any area of education and this is especially true in music. Greater demands, if the choir is sing-

Greater demands, if the choir is sing-ing interesting music, well prepared and well presented, will usually bring, not only better singing, but a keener inter-est and response. A choir that rehearses half an hour or even an hour a week and that sings one service a Sunday or less, will very often sound just about what it is — under-rehearsed and inex-perienced. The skill and artistry of many of the great English and Contin-ental choirs is in part, due to not only the fine, talented and carefully selected singers heard in a live resonant building but also to the fact they are rehearsing singers heard in a live resonant building but also to the fact they are rehearsing and performing together as a closely-knit team, several times not only each week, but each day. Each knows the sound of the other's voice and the weight and strength required for every phrase and line. They also know the building in which they sing and it can, and often does, become the best voice in the choir.

and often does, become the best voice in the choir. One of the great arguments for the use of boys to sing the treble part in liturgical music, apart from their im-personal etherial tone quality, is un-doubtedly that if properly trained and kept singing on through the changing period, they will become tenors and basses, and if one is lucky and knowl-edgeable even counter-tenors or as they basses, and if one is lucky and knowl-edgeable even counter-tenors or as they are often called, "male altos." A na-tional survey recently made in Canada shows, in spite of more people in more choirs, the total number of men singing tenor and bass has declined. We Canadian Anglicans make no bones about the fact that the mixed choir which has no boys, or which does not hold the interest of the boy is very often short of men. In some areas, junior and intermediate choirs now sing the chief services in churches, in unison or two parts, and while no one would want to deny these children a chance to sing, every effort should be made to recruit and effort should be made to recruit and train men as tenors and basses. To be a skillful part singer takes time and training, and men of middle years are usually not very healthy prospects. It is to the young men we must look, and from whom we will have the keen re-sponse. My experience has been that singing in a choir becomes a way of life for young men. It is the normal thing to attend two or three rehearsals a week and to sing three services on Sun-day in my choir. It has the greatest re-wards for both the singer and the choir-master. One need not list the other benefits, like the comradeship and team-work effort so strongly felt.

benefits, like the comradeship and team-work effort so strongly felt. The rise of the so called "religious folk-singing" groups is strong evidence that there is an ever increasing desire on the part of people to sing. So often, people become sympathetic to this form of sacred music because they have never been exposed to the rich heritage of good church music. In large measure, we musicians, as choirmasters, are to blame here. It can-not be denied that we are in a very favourable position to expose to masses of people either the good or the very mediocre music. I shall deal with the choice of music later. In a world changing more rapidly

In a world changing more rapidly than ever before, in a world that is questioning and seeking answers, it seems that choirs are offered a real challenge for service, to fill a need per-haps greater than ever before. The choir and its leader must be ready and will-ing to fulfill this role. If music is the "handmaid of religion," then it must truly be the "servant", to enhance and adorn public worship, as well as to enrich the lives of those who make music. music.

Music and Its Choice

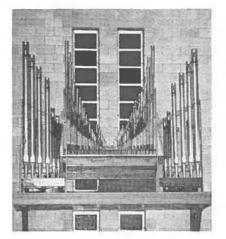

Dr. Eric Routley in his splendid book, Twentieth Century Church Music, be-gins the preface as follows: "In church gins the preface as follows: "In church music there has been no age so full of surprises, and so full of creative promise as our own. I stand by this hazardous judgement in the face of any defender of the 16th century." Let us hope this proves to be true for as with most devel-opments it is impossible to evaluate them objectively when in the midst. Early in this address there was an ap-peal to the past — in order to know the present and to direct, to some extent, the future of music. Our tastes and se-lections of music should be catholic and comprehensive. Choirs should know and lections of music should be catholic and comprehensive. Choirs should know and perform music representative of each period spanning the last four hundred years, including the great Victorian era. We are all inclined to certain fads and phase. At the moment there is in organ literature a massive reaction against the romantic and as a result we hear Bach romantic and as a result, we hear Bach romantic and as a result, we hear Bach, pre-Bach, and contemporary music al-most exclusively in recital. We are not here to debate organ literature but rather choral literature, and on this I take a very firm stand; see that your choral tastes embrace representative works of all periods of church music. The late Dr Edmund Fellows in bis worthy in text and worthy in concep-tion and construction. Anglicans are these days being con-fronted with the folk mass, religious "pop" music and the like. They are by no means alone, we realize, when we read press accounts from all over the world of musical activities in a variety of churches. What is our attitude to he? Is it our duty to be popular just be-cause this is what is wanted? My frank opinion is this music has a temporary and superficial appeal. If young people have been exposed to nothing better, this may satisfy, but I am convinced that if good music of all periods is known to them, it will hold its place with any contemporary "pop" church music. music.

The late Dr. Edmund Fellowes in his distinguished book, Cathedral Music from Edward VI to Edward VII, draws from Edward VI to Edward VII, draws an interesting comparison of cathedral service lists by printing a selection from a variety of cathedrals, representative of good music. We find the mid-Victorians were doing music of their own age al-most exclusively. No doubt they were very much "with it" to use a colloquial-ism of our time! Seventy-five years later nost exclusively. No doubt they were very much "with it" to use a colloquial-ism of our time! Seventy-five years later we find the same cathedrals had aban-doned huge amounts of the weaker Vic-torian literature and had reached back into an extensive use of Tudor and Restoration music and even were ven-turing into the contemporary music of 20th century as exemplified by Vaugh-an-Williams. In my appeal to hear other choirs, I might also point out that both by actual visitation and recordings, our knowledge of repertoire is greatly en-larged and enhanced. What of the pres-ent and its music? The English-speaking countries have their musical giants of our age, tried and established. Herbert Howells and Benjamin Britten certainly Howells and Benjamin Britten certainly well represent Britain in any age. Leo Sowerby and Healey Willan have worthily commanded the scene not only on this commanded the scene nor only on this continent but in Britain and parts of Europe. Countless others are daily adding their contributions to the world library of church music, some-times worthily but often not. Let us be careful that we do not assume and accareful that we do not assume and ac-cept the concept that because it is new it is better (inspite of what the soap commercials say), or, on he other hand, that because it's old, it's superior. All music must stand on its own merit, worthy in text and worthy in concep-tion and construction.

So again the challenge is to the choir master. It is he who develops and guides the tastes of not only the choir but of his congregation. It is he who develops his congregation. It is he who develops the musical character and ethos of music in worship. The opportunities are endless. But each to his task: not to man's glory which we constantly seek, but to the greater glory of God both now and ever. To you we extend the challenge: the real fulfilment of the choral demands of the 20th century. It is a time of challenge. The opportunity is yours, is yours.

LITTLE ROCK CATHEDRAL ORGAN BUILT BY SIPE

R. CRAIG CHOTARD IS ORGANIST

Four Manual Divisions Are Included Design — Fourth Organ in for Historic Church

Robert L. Sipe, Inc., Dallas, Tex. has completed an organ for Trinity Epis-copal Cathedral, Little Rock, Ark. The instrument was finished last summer and is one of the largest instruments in the state. The cathedral is one of the oldest Episcopal cathedrals in use west of the Mississippi. The first organ was an Erben tracker of 1889, installed one an Erben tracker of 1889, installed one year after completion of the cathedral; it was replaced by a Roosevelt from a New York City church about 1917. A Möller was installed in 1928; parts of this instrument were redesigned for in-corporation in the present instrument. The new organ has four manual di-visions including an encased gallery organ which features horizontal trum-pets. The gallery case and the facade of

organ which reatures horizontal trum-pets. HANSEN CO. COMPLETES ORGAN IN RUSHVILLE

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH IN

Three-Manual Combines Pipework from Three Old Instruments with Several New Ranks

A three-manual organ of 34 stops and 46 ranks has been installed in the First Methodist Church of Rushville, Ill. by Hansen Organs, Quincy, Ill. It replaced a 1920 two-manual 9-rank Möller or-gan. The new installation was a re-build of a three manual Austin organ. gan. The new installation was a re-build of a three manual Austin organ using much new pipe work as well as pipe work from the old Möller organ and from the original Austin organ. William A. Books

Two fine books we have received would make highly suitable Christmas gifts for serious organists. Karl Geir-inger's scholarly, readable and engross-ing Johann Sebastian Bach, the Culmin-ation of an Era (Oxford) should be nearly indispensable for the study shelves of any serious Bach scholar. It is admir-able in organization and presentation of any serious Bach scholar. It is admir-able in organization and presentation. F. E. Kirby's A Short History of Key-board Music (The Free Press, MacMil-lan Company) covers a wide area from the hydraulis to John Cage interestingly though not always in depth. The exten-sive bibliography and indexes are es-pecially valuable and the material itself is so fascinating one will want to return to this book frequently.

is so fascinating one will want to return to this book frequently. Hymns are a subject under the spot-light this month. Augsburg's Hymns and How to Sing Them is edited by Mandus A. Egge and Janet Moede. Part I contains chapters on singing in the house traching hymns to various area home, teaching hymns to various ages, congregational hymn rehearsal, festivals etc. Part 2 takes separate hymns — one for each Sunday and Holy Day of the year — and discusses each text and tune and gives suggestions for performance. This little paperback has enough ideas to be worth more than its reasonable cost to most any church musician.

cost to most any church musician. The Catholic Hymnal and Service Book, (Benziger Editions, New York) comes in a "pew edition", with unhar-monized tune and English text, and a spiral bound "organ edition" completely harmonized. This is a major improve-ment over other Catholic hymnals we have seen and will doubtless fill a major need at this period of change. The edit-ing, printing and binding are all good. Hymns for Youth, published by the Hig, printing and binding are all good, Hymms for Youth, published by the William B. Eerdmans Publishing Com-pany for the National Union of Chris-tian Schools, is a compilation of a wide variety of hymns which sustains a higher level of quality than often encountered in youth materials. The book is attrac-tioner beyond begut fully illustrated tively bound and beautifully illustrated - in all, a book school-agers should en-joy and take pride in.

Gatherine Sicbel's Sacred Songs, a Guide to Repertory (H. W. Gray) should be useful to church soloists, teachers and church music directors who make use of solos, duets, trios etc. Songs by composers of many generations, from many publishers, and for every conceiv-able occasion are listed. – FC

Joyce Jones has been named artist-in-Joyce Jones has been named artist-in-residence and professor at Huston-Tillotson College, Austin, Tex., for the 1966-67 aca-dem:c year. She will remain in her position of teaching assistant at the University of Texas in Austin, and will continue her work there on her doctor of music degree. Her concert season is now sold-out, with 35 re-citals scheduled for this current season.

Hank is now a Father

Born to Mrs. Roberta Papale, wife of Henry Papale, on September 8,4:00 AM: a baby girl, weight 7 lbs., christened Jennifer Elizabeth Papale.

This is Hank's first-born and he is beamingly and justly proud. (Photo taken before the event.)

Actually, in another sense of the word, this is not the first time Hank is a father. From his keen musical mind have come many brain children. Most recently he fathered an arrangement of Motherless Child (Sometimes I Feel Like a). In fact, Hank is presently on a negro spiritual kick. All he does all day long is arrange negro spirituals. But these arrangements for mixed chorus are so unique and imaginative that you'd wish he'd just keep on arranging more and more.

In "WADE IN THE WATER" Hank employs simple but effective modulations. His "MY LORD WHAT A MOURNING" is cleverly expanded into a larger composition enhanced by cleverly manipulated syncopations. In the whimsical "WAKE UP JACOB" Hank employs delightful and humorous choral tricks.

Every director of a chorus should investigate Hank's family of compositions and arrangements. See your dealer or just write WLSM for a selection of Hank's brain children on approval. You will be sent a pack of 5 or 6 choral arrangements including the negro spiritauls mentioned above. But it will not include Jennifer Papale. That's Hank's baby!
